win, for Miller went to his corner in a very disgrantled state. Morgan devoted the seventh round, however, to a play for recuperation on his own are u it, and when the eighth opened and he attempted to resume his rushing tactics, he found Mitler ready for him, and he caught from the Hoosier's right a nose-rattler which drew the blood. It was not until the thirteenth that the Chicagoau again tried the eyclonic act, and then again he found his nasal organ visited by Miller's fist, not once only but once m the latter blow taking him clean off his foot. Then, for a few rounds there were light exchanges by the men, with only an occasional hard hitting. Things threatened to become tame, when, just in time to arouse the spectators again, Morgan started another rush This time it was Miller's left which he met and it struck him on the neck. The blow had hardly been delivered, however, when which took Morgan once more off his feet. There was another partial let-up of a few rounds, and then, in the twenty-fifth. He hit Morgan a blow in the mouth which effected another clean knockdown, and but for the gong which ended the round.

Hoosier took up his unfinished work fust where he had left it. Slam, bat g. smash went his fists, one after the other, and down went Morgan time after time, his Chicago grit bringing him up again, however, to face the terrible mnishment. Finally, full on the neck, fell the knockout blow, and though the beaten man still made an effort to rise and stay the round out the contest was over as far as he was oncerned. Morgan's pluck was as much commented upon by the spectators as was Miller's force.
